BFI'S AFRICAN ODYSSEYS PRESENTS:
Bob Marley: The Making of a Legend and Exodus: Finding Shelter
at BFI Southbank on Saturday 17 December

BFI's African Odysseys strand presents a double-bill of music inspired films this December. The premiere screening of Bob Marley: The Making of a Legend comes from directors Esther Anderson (the former partner of Marley) and Gian Godoy and takes look at the Jamaica that influenced Marley's early years prior to his international success. An independently financed film, made with a low budget aesthetic, creates an intimate and personal account of this extraordinary figure that would otherwise be missing in a more commercial production.

Also screening will be the new documentary, Exodus: Finding Shelter from directors Tommaso D'Elia and Silvia Bonanni. The documentary follows the fate of the massively successful Rototom Sunsplash reggae festival after local government opposition drove it out of its original home in Italy.

About African Odysseys

The African Odysseys strand has been running for almost five years and presents a selection of screenings focusing on the experience of Africa and its diaspora with the programme aiming to challenge attitudes and provoke discussion. African Odysseys responds to an absence of available content relating directly to the cultural and historical experience of Africa and its people.

The strand doesn't have a single curator but brings together a wide cross-section of cultural activists, film-makers, community leaders and writers who propose events throughout the year. In addition to a collective strategy for programming events, African Odysseys utilises an innovative way of working with audiences, extending its reach through grass roots organisations and welcoming new audiences who would otherwise not be aware of the BFI.
