Faster, Higher, Stronger: The Ultimate Race.
at BFI Southbank / May 14 / 18:15

With the Olympic Games coming to London in less than 100 days, BFI Southbank presents a preview screening of the upcoming BBC documentary Faster, Higher, Stronger: The Ultimate Race. The screening will be followed by a very special on-stage discussion with the filmmakers and some of Britain's past Olympians who will be revealed in upcoming weeks.

This new documentary tells the story of the 1500m – the Blue Riband event of any Olympics. The Ultimate Race reveals how the 1500m was the platform for the most famous chapter in British athletics history. In the 1980 and 1984 Games, three British runners – Sebastian Coe, Steve Ovett and Steve Cram – battled it out for Olympic Gold in dramatic races that gripped the nation.

Part of the new BBC2 series Faster, Higher, Stronger, the film uses rarely-seen Olympic archive material to show how these British athletes are also part of a global tradition. Since the modern Games began in 1896 the 1500m has always attracted the most creative, innovative and exceptional athletes from unexpected corners of the world, from the 'Flying Finns' of the 1920s to today's African high-altitude champions. These runners devised groundbreaking training regimes, pushed human endurance to the limit, and emerged with an unquenchable will to win this most demanding Olympic event. Shot in Kenya, Morocco, Finland, Australia and the UK, the film features new interviews with Olympic 1500m champions including Sebastian Coe, Hicham El Guerrouj, Kipchoge Keino, Peter Rono, Peter Snell and Herb Elliott.
