FILM INDUSTRY COMPANIES

In the UK, the majority of film industry companies are in the production and post-production sectors, but most of these are small companies. The exhibition sector has the greatest proportion of large companies, the top 10 of which generated 92% of the sector’s total turnover in 2015.

FACTS IN FOCUS

- In 2015, there were over 6,800 film production companies and almost 2,700 post-production companies in the UK.

- There were 420 film distributors and 230 film exhibitors.

- The majority of companies were small (turnover under £250,000).

- The production, post-production and distribution sectors were concentrated in London and the South East, while the exhibition sector was more dispersed.

- Outside London and the South East there were significant production and post-production clusters in the East of England, the South West and the North West.
NUMBER OF COMPANIES IN THE FILM INDUSTRY

The number of companies involved in the film industry has grown by 47% since 2010, compared to the UK all industries average of 17% (Table 1). The most substantial growth was seen in the number of video production (198%) and distribution (89%) companies, which might partly be explained by the rise in demand for online audiovisual content. The number of film production companies has increased by 42%. In this instance, the growth may reflect the number of special purpose vehicles (SPVs) created for specific productions but which remain in existence as companies after the completion of those titles. (These SPVs will usually only be involved in the production of one film). The number of film distribution and film exhibition companies has remained broadly stable since 2010.

In 2015 there were 6,805 film production companies, 2,660 film, video and TV post-production companies, 420 film distribution companies and 230 film exhibition companies.

Notes:
Data as at March 2015.
* Companies in the post-production sector usually work on films, commercials, videos and television programmes, and therefore have a combined statistical classification.

Video production company turnover saw the most substantial rise between 2010 and 2015 (70%) but film production and distribution companies accounted for the largest proportions of turnover in the period (Table 2).

In 2015, the turnover of film production companies was £2,967 million, an increase of 12% compared with 2010. Film, video and TV post-production company turnover was £1,478 million, an increase of 11% on 2010, and film exhibition company turnover was £1,339 million an increase of 39% compared with 2010.

As Figure 1 shows, in 2015 although film distributors represented 3% of film industry companies, they accounted for 31% of film industry turnover. This reflects the dominant position of the UK subsidiaries of the major US studios in the film value chain. Film, video and TV post-production companies represented 21% of companies and 16% of total turnover.

SIZE DISTRIBUTION OF FILM COMPANIES

The size distribution of film companies in 2015 is shown in Tables 3 to 6. In most sectors, the majority of companies were very small with an annual turnover of less than £250,000. In the film exhibition sector there were an equal number of companies with an annual turnover of less than £250,000 or £250,000 or more.

NATIONAL/REGIONAL DISTRIBUTION OF FILM COMPANIES IN THE UK

Tables 7 and 8 show the national/regional distribution of film companies and film company turnover in 2015. Overall, 71% of film companies were concentrated in London and the South East, and over 78% of turnover was generated by companies located in these two regions. The London concentration was particularly strong for distribution (61% of companies and 97% of turnover) but the exhibition sector was more widely spread across the UK, with 74% of companies and 44% of turnover associated with companies based outside London.

While London and the South East dominate in production and post-production, there are significant regional centres, particularly in the East of England, the South West and the North West.

LEADING FILM PRODUCTION COMPANIES IN THE UK

Drawing on the BFI Research and Statistics Unit’s production database and public information, Table 9 presents the production companies involved in the greatest number of UK feature film projects between 2013 and 2015. Three companies topped the list with a total of nine films each for the period – Working Title Films, which had the highest combined budget of the three (£177 million; equivalent to a mean budget per film of £20 million), Vertigo Films (combined budget of £45 million) and Pinewood Pictures (combined budget of £37 million). North Bank Entertainment produced eight films, but had the lowest combined budget at £500,000.

Notes:
Companies ranked by number of films produced, then by estimated combined budget.
'Estimated combined budget' is the sum of the estimated budgets of all the films associated with the named company. It is not a measure of that company’s contribution to the budget. Most films had a number of production companies associated with them and financing came from a variety of sources including National Lottery funding, UK film tax relief, equity investment, US studio investment, distributor minimum guarantees and television pre-sales.
The table includes companies associated with five or more films over the three-year period.
